Editorial Note

From humble beginnings, the Dimapur Government College Multi-disciplinary Journal is climbing up notches towards academic excellence in the field of research and writing. The DGC Journal reflects the research activity status of the College which is a defining parameter of the academic aspect of the college. This publication marks the completion of Vol. II, Issue No. 2.

In the call for research publications, the pursuit of quality is of paramount importance and it has also been a challenge and a pressing need for DGC Journal to maintain quality control. As such the Editorial board of the journal ensures that the papers received go through the various filter processes of paper scrutiny, peer review, plagiarism check and proof reading.

The DGC journal continues to maintain its multi-disciplinary approach and the present volume provides a feature article on NEP 2020 considering that the NEP 2020 seeks to promote interdisciplinary research and innovation in the Higher Education Institutions (HEIs). Today, it has caught the attention of the Indian Academia and which has thrown up context challenges and which continues to generate healthy discussions across India.

The other papers touch areas of value education, social and economic, health and environmental issues. An academic research and analysis on these very important aspects are vital to create situational realities and the issues and challenges therein, and for mapping the well-being index of the society. The book review will take readers to the unique political slavery of depressed classes while bringing out the other side of Gandhi.

This volume is the culmination of sweat of various people and our sincere acknowledgement goes to them. Along with the sincere efforts of the Research Committee, DGC which is also the Editorial Board of the Journal, our utmost appreciation goes to our esteemed Peer reviewers for valuable comments, suggestions and recommendations which adds trust in presenting the Journal to the readers. Besides, it reflects on quality of the papers as a Peer-Reviewed Journal. We are indeed thankful to the Researchers and Scholars who have contributed their papers and thereby making this issue of the journal possible.

We also sincerely thank our Principal Dr. M. Libanthung Ngullie, IQAC Coordinator Dr. Vitsosie Vüprü and all the esteemed faculty members of DGC for the various forms of encouragement, support and assistance.

We proudly present this issue of the Journal to our readers. Comments and feedbacks will be much appreciated and may be emailed at researchcommitteedgc@gmail.com.

Foreword

It is indeed a privilege for me to pen the foreword of the DGC Journal Vol. II Issue 2, 2021. At the outset, I congratulate the Editorial team for their hard work in bringing out this academic piece. I also express my deep appreciation to the esteemed authors who have done serious research, spending sleepless nights, to seek the truth and present them in these short writings.

In this issue of the Journal, a number of interesting topics have been covered: The NEP 2020 promises major reforms to bring the educational system of the country at par with global standards. A paper is dedicated to study of the objectives and the process of implementation of the New Policy. A paper on the importance of waste management argues that improper disposal of waste products poses health hazards to the residents especially in the urban areas. It calls for concerted efforts for waste management through public awareness.

Issues and challenges faced by the Street Vendors in Dimapur is being examined by the authors, who asserts that in spite of the presence the Street Vending Act 2014, the authorities often clamp down on the Street vendors. The vendors also work under extremely stressful conditions like ten hours per day, six days a week and working often without drinking water, electricity, toilets and shelter from sun and rain.

Rural to Urban migration has been a major challenge for policy makers for the last many decades. A paper is dedicated to study the problems which concludes that lack of employment avenues and poor educational facilities in the rural areas are the main factors that drive the residents to migrate from rural to urban areas. The study also reveals that strong social and moral aspects, including community spirit of village life have been severely challenged due to migration.

Over and above the objective of the NEP 2020 for promotion of Indian values and culture including indigenous and tribal knowledge, a paper advocates that Education system should foster universal and eternal values that will help in balanced development of self and the society. In this regard, local cultural ethos and more etc., may be inculcated in the educational system, the paper opines.

Apart from these, there are a number of papers dedicated to various topics that makes this Journal a delight for the readers.

Of late, the job description of the higher education teachers is changing from simple classroom teaching and evaluation to continuous research and up gradation of knowledge. This is intended to ensure quality in provision of knowledge to the learners, as the research done by the teachers directly or indirectly benefits the community in general and the students in particular. Also, producing such an academic journal by an educational institution is extremely indispensable for providing a platform for teachers and research scholars to hone their skills of writing as well as sharing their research findings.

I wish the journal a grand success!
